Former Czech Minister Arrives in Canada

Among passengers who arrived in Montreal recently aboard Empress of Canada was Z. A. Nenecek, accompanied by his wife and daughter. Mr. Nenecek resigned as Czech minister to Copenhagen when Communists grabbed control of his homeland.

Manitoba Agriculture Minister May Head Cabinet This Week

WINNIPEG, Nov. 8 (CP).—Agriculture Minister Douglas Lloyd Campbell, fond of describing himself as "Scottish and cautious," probably will take over this week from Premier Garson as head of Manitoba's Coalition Government.

Proud of his ancestry, he refers to the year of his birth—1895—as "one of the best crop years Manitoba ever had and I was part of it." Mr. Campbell speaks with a fluency cultivated in his long association with the Provincial Legislature. He has been Agriculture Minister since 1936 and a member of the Legislature since 1927.

He has the same short and lumber build of Stuart Garson and walks with shoulders squared. An unconscious swagger imparts the look of an athlete to his slim figure. He speaks with a husky voice, gesturing continually with his hands.

Born in Portage la Prairie, Man., he received his schooling there and at Brandon. One of his chief prizes is the Island Man, where he still has a three-quarter section grain farm he never intended leaving until he took up politics.

Premier Garson is expected to resign officially this week to enter the Federal field. And Mr. Campbell probably will decide the new Cabinet appointments in consultation with Public Works Minister Erick P. Willis, the provincial Progressive Conservative leader, who was given the new title of deputy minister by the week-end caucus which chose the Province's next Premier.

The 30-hour caucus, which ended early Sunday with announcement of Mr. Campbell's selection, Mr. Willis' new title and scheduled appointment of an additional Progressive Conservative to a Cabinet post, is regarded in parliamentary circles as a major victory for the Progressive Conservatives.

Besides this new Cabinet post, two others appear to be open. Premier Garson also handled the Treasury portfolio and this is expected to be taken over by either Mr. Campbell or Labor Minister C. Rhodes Smith. The new Premier has indicated he will relinquish his present post, thus opening up another Cabinet vacancy.

Under the coalition setup as agreed upon in caucus, the Liberal Progressives will hold eight Cabinet posts while the Progressive Conservatives will have four, one more than they have now.

Drew Promises Support To Cause of Provinces

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., Nov. 8 (CP).—George Drew, national leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, said tonight that the unity of Canada is more important to him than a party victory in the next Federal election.

In a speech at the Empire Theatre here, Mr. Drew lashed out at the Federal Government, reiterated his views on Dominion-Provincial relations and pledged his support to the cause of the provinces. Mr. Drew is making a tour of the Maritimes.

He told the overflow audience that he had visited, this morning, the chamber where the Fathers of Confederation held their first meeting.

Mr. Drew, recalling that the Island is the "cradle of Confederation," said: "It seems particularly fitting that I should speak to you about the most important domestic problem facing our people today—the building of a strong, united and efficient system of government throughout Canada."

The conditions laid down at Confederation were "just as valid and just as binding today as they were when accepted."

Mr. Drew said that at the conference he had suggested the setting up of a national adjustment fund to meet any special requirements not covered in terms of the taxation agreements under discussion.

As a provincial premier, he had said: "The Ontario Government has at all times expressed its belief in the principle of fiscal aid to those provinces which from time to time require financial assistance."

"I hold the same views now which I presented at this conference," said Mr. Drew.

Obtains Suite To Benefit Senior Women

A three-room suite on Government Street soon will be available for the convenience of Victoria's senior women. Canon Michael Coleman said at the rally last night that launched Senior Citizens' Week.

"Representatives of the Church of England secured the rooms through the courtesy of Spencer's," Canon Coleman said. "We expect they will be ready for use within two weeks."

"They will be open to all senior women in the city, regardless of their religious affiliation," he said.

Canon Coleman envisaged the suite as a place where senior women could come to read, knit and enjoy the company of others. He said it is likely that clergymen will visit the rooms during the noon hour.

The suite probably will be open every day except Sunday, he said. Hours would be 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Wednesday, and 10 to 4 on other days.

May Spare Patient Full Truth

BOSTON, Nov. 8 (AP).—A cancer authority said today that sometimes it is better to spare a patient the whole truth.

Dr. Charles C. Lund, chairman of the educational committee of the American Cancer Society, told the American Public Health Association: "The doctor is bound in his duty to his patient to do whatever is best for his patient and to avoid doing him harm. . . . There are some circumstances when he cannot, for the patient's own good, tell him the whole truth."

But what if a patient asks directly "Is this cancer?" Then, Dr. Lund says, "The doctor is forced to answer 'Yes.'"

But Dr. Lund said, the doctor "can always go on to explain in the same sentence . . . in a way that can reduce greatly the shock that is always associated with the bald assertion."

Dr. Lund reported the blunt statement "This is a cancer" would be taken differently by patients and mean "hopeless cancer" to many.

Some patients, he said, might decide against treatment because they believed there was no cure. Others could be so upset mentally that they might "leave a doctor and go to a charlatan in whose hands all hope will be lost."

With "hopeless cancer," he said, the truth is better "almost always."

Mountain Differential Termed Millstone by Fruit Growers

KELOWNA, B.C., Nov. 8 (CP).—The British Columbia Fruit Growers' Association today termed the mountain differential in railway freight rates a "millstone around the neck of industry" in the Okanagan Valley.

The brief was heard before a three-man commission hearing the application for the Provinces of British Columbia for the removal of the mountain differential in Canada's freight-rate structure.

"We are convinced that the imposition of the mountain differential was and is still contrary to the Railway Act and to the understanding under which British Columbia joined the Dominion," the brief said.

The geographical position of the Okanagan Valley assured the railways of "just about" 100 per cent of the haul of inbound growers' supplies and outbound movement of fruit and vegetables.

"No other fruit-producing area in Canada contributes so heavily in transportation charges," it said.

The railways should, "of their own volition, have extended to this industry genuine commodity rates."

The B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd., fruit growers' sales organization, charged that the mountain differential was adopted by the Canadian National Railways "notwithstanding the total absence of the conditions under which the Canadian Pacific was constructed."

"The railway has been amply repaid for its efforts, and one has but to recall the melon-banquets of other years to recognize the truth of (this) contention."

"NO LONGER TENABLE"
"It is contended further that the mountain differential is no longer tenable, either in fact or in principle," the brief said.

The B.C. Interior Vegetable Marketing Board, in a brief presented by L. R. Stephens of Kelowna, charged that the differential "has tended to retard movement of vegetables from British Columbia to the Prairie Provinces."

"We are not attempting to leave the impression that the mountains are solely responsible for (the) drop in tonnage shipped from B.C. but to demonstrate that high transportation charges do effectively restrict movement," he said.

The board finished its Kelowna hearings today and was scheduled to proceed to Nelson, B.C., tonight. Nelson interests will present their case tomorrow.

Shipment from the Pacific Coast has been under a contract negotiated in 1946 and which was to have ended on June 30, 1948. At the beginning of this year, shippers were allowed down at the request of Britain and the contract was spun out until the end of the year.

JAPANESE TO HANG

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 8 (AP).—One Japanese today was sentenced to be hanged, another to life imprisonment and six others to a total of 30 years at hard labor for their parts in the Palawan massacre in the Philippines. The massacre occurred December 14, 1944, when 150 Americans were herded into an air raid shelter, doused with gasoline and set afire. Some who tried to flee were shot, bayoneted or beheaded.

LEAMINGTON, Ont., Nov. 8 (CP).—Mrs. J. Klassen, 56, had an odd experience yesterday—she was shot but not injured. A .22 calibre bullet plowed through the front door of her home, bounced off the door casing and struck her hand. It was almost spent by that time and didn't even break the skin. The bullet had been fired by a youth during target practice.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 8 (AP).—Edgar R. Andrews had an auto driving licence to show police when they asked for it last Saturday—but it was for 1905.

Today in court, police testified Andrews insisted his licence was good for life. The statutes show that in 1903 yearly renewals became compulsory.

Andrews promised Judge Frank Riley he would renew his licence. The judge said: "Fine, five dollars."

POSTER, R.I., Nov. 8 (AP).—Leslie Stone, who, running as a Republican, defeated his wife, Lillian B. Stone, running as a Democrat, for the posts of town treasurer and tax collector last Tuesday, resigned both offices Saturday ten minutes after he had been sworn in.

And Mrs. Stone, as part of the pre-election plan, was promptly named by the town council to fill both offices.

The Republicans had wanted to run Mrs. Stone, though a Democrat, but had been balked by provisions of the state's primary law. Therefore they ran her husband, with the understanding he would resign if elected. He was and he did.

TOKIO, Nov. 8 (AP).—An estimated 3,000 Government workers today demanded the immediate resignation of the Cabinet. The union men accused the Cabinet of thinking only of party benefits. The Government workers demanded wage of 7,300 yen a month. Twenty workers began a sit-down protest on the steps of the Premier's residence.

Shock Victim Condition Not Critical

Albert S. Bevan, 1031 Wollaston Street, was in serious, but not critical condition, last night after his wrist and shoulder were burned by a 2,300-volt power line at the B.C. Electric's May Street sub-station before noon yesterday.

According to B.C. Electric spokesmen, Bevan was working with a saw on a framework in the basement of the sub-station when he touched the line with his wrist.

The accident caused a temporary disruption in service to part of the Fairfield district, officials said.

Working with him were Gordon Royan, Philip Crampton and Gilbert Barber. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital by C. & C. Ambulance, but did not lose consciousness.

Fewer Delinquents in Victoria Magistrate Informs Gyro Club

Juvenile delinquency in Victoria was reduced by a third during the first ten months of this year as compared with a similar period last year, Magistrate Henry C. Hall told the Gyro Club yesterday at the Empress Hotel.

"This is a good sign," he said, "especially in these troubled times, and when Greater Victoria's population is steadily increasing. Few other cities in Canada can make the same claim."

The city juvenile court treats offenders as "young people needing help, guidance and supervision," rather than as offenders, the magistrate remarked.

In the more serious cases, he said, the offenders are placed in a detention home, jointly operated by the city and the municipalities, "to think things over."

The city's juvenile court was "very informal," the speaker continued, "and was attended by a representative of the Children's Aid Society and probation officers involved in the case."

In all juvenile cases, a full report on the child was prepared. This covered home life, general environment, parents, type of recreation, companions, and school records.

It was not surprising, said Magistrate Hall, that youth actively engaged in sports or other suitable recreation seldom appear before court.

He said parents can do a great deal toward diverting their children from bad to good channels.

Magistrate Hall praised the Gyro Club, and other service clubs which sponsored youth projects in the city, as the community can do much toward prevention of delinquency.

DEBUNK APPEAL

A recent appeal to radio amateurs, asking them to avoid operating near emergency channels, showed "a complete lack of knowledge of the frequencies used for radio communication."

Doubting that the appeal could have come from official sources, R. V. Parrell, of the Emergency Corps, American Radio Relay League, said here yesterday that "no stations, amateur or commercial, operate near the frequency."

He was referring to the 500 kilocycle International Distress Channel.

He pointed out that all amateur frequencies were located in the short-wave spectrum, far removed from the long-wave frequencies where the distress channel is found.

City Library Sets Record For Books Loaned in Day

More books were borrowed from the Victoria Public Library on Saturday than on any day in recent years, Miss Margaret Clay, librarian, said yesterday.

Greater Victoria residents borrowed a total of 2,335 books. Oak Bay residents borrowed 346, Saanich residents 447, Esquimalt residents 81 and city residents 1,461.

"It is significant that the number of adult non-fiction books borrowed, and the number of children's books borrowed were far above the figures for any day in the past several years," Miss Clay said.

Adult non-fiction was most popular with 827 books borrowed, but non-fiction with 783 and children's books with 725 were not far behind. Non-fiction has been steadily gaining popularity for some time, Miss Clay said. Most popular single field in the non-fiction category on Saturday was applied science.

Greater Victoria citizens borrowed 150 of these books, to help them in such things as getting jobs and building houses.

Books were borrowed Saturday at the rate of 194 an hour, Miss Clay said.

Biggest circulation in 1947 was on January 25, when 2,253 books were borrowed. Top figure for 1946 was 2,330, recorded on November 23.

Miss Clay said she checked records back to 1940 and no other days could approach Saturday's circulation.

Take Gasoline

NANAIMO, Nov. 8.—Robert Hunt and James Miller pleaded guilty before Magistrate Lionel Beaver-Potts to a charge of stealing gasoline from a bus last Saturday night, and were each fined $75, or in default 60 days in prison. The accused were apprehended by Constable George Brassard, Provincial Police.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 8.—The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., produced 9,008 vehicles last month. Of the total, 6,115 were for the domestic market, comprising 4,490 passenger models and 1,606 trucks.

FARM INCOME BOOSTED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8 (AP).—Farm income in the United States reached a postwar peak in September and took a downward turn in October. An Agriculture Department report showed today that receipts from sale of farm products dropped 3 per cent below those of October last year. This was the first time since the end of the war that farm income fell below that of the corresponding month of the previous year.

Rally Demands $50 Month, Pensions at 60

Old-age pensions of $50 and lowering of the pension age were urged last night at a rally in the Naval Veterans' Auditorium that launched Senior Citizens' Week in Victoria.

The audience unanimously passed a resolution that called for "a basic Federal rate, paid to all persons 60 years of age and older, of not less than $50 a month." The present age requirement is 70 years.

The resolution also suggested that provision be made for revision of the pension rate as the cost of living changes.

It said the pension reform should be considered as part of a comprehensive social security program.

MANY SPEAKERS

Representatives of the Provincial Government, the city, church, labor and old-age pensioners addressed the meeting, sponsored by the Senior Citizens' Campaign Council. Chairman was John L. Martin.

The way a country treats its old people is a measure of its civilization, said Charles W. Lundy, British Columbia director of welfare.

He said he believed British Columbia rates high among Canadian provinces in its treatment of old-age pensioners, but said he would like to see British Columbia heading the list. As it is, he said, British Columbia pays a cost-of-living bonus of $10, while Alberta pays $7, Saskatchewan $5, Ontario amounts ranging up to $10, and no bonuses in the other provinces.

FIND DIFFICULTY

Alderman Frank Mulliner, representing the city, pointed out the difficulty some persons of 65 find in making a living, when they are unable to work but not old enough to draw a pension.

Canon Michael Coleman said the pensioners are not getting something for nothing.

"They have paid in citizenship," he said.

Percy A. Raymont, president of the Victoria and District Trades and Labor Council, said labor "will at all times use its best efforts to forward any representations of old-age pensioners."

"The time is now to bring pressure to bear on Governments to plan for social security for everybody," he said. "Old-age pensions would be included."

William Partridge, treasurer of the Old-Age Pensioners' Organization, Branch No. 3, said it was "impossible" for pensioners who get $30 or even $40 a month to pay rent and buy food, clothing, fuel and other necessities.

MOBILE BLOOD CLINIC

The Red Cross Mobile Blood Clinic will visit Vancouver Island again this week.

Two Druggists From City Complete Test

Two Victorians were among nine students who passed supplementary examinations of the Pharmaceutical Association of British Columbia, Arthur P. McDuffee, registrar, said yesterday.

They are Miss Doris E. Fulk, Royal Jubilee Hospital, and L. M. Shore, Darling's Pharmacy.

R. J. Dick, now with Cumberland Drugs Ltd., Cumberland, was named fourth in a list of students who passed the full examinations. Heading the list was Bruce G. Turnbull, of Vancouver.

The board of examiners approved registration in British Columbia of 16 graduates from other provinces and considered applications from 72 students serving their one year of practical experience in drug stores in the province. They plan to enter the College of Pharmacy at University of British Columbia when they complete their year of training.

Fire Damage $500 In Basement Blaze

About $500 damage was caused about 11 a.m. Sunday when fire gutted the basement in the home of H. P. Simpson, 1427 Oliver Street, Oak Bay fire department reported yesterday.

Damage also was caused to a rear room of the house, and smoke was so dense firemen were forced to use masks. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

HORNS STOLEN

R. L. Johnson, 1708 Douglas Street, reported to police Sunday afternoon the theft of a dual set of car horns from his car while it was parked in the alley at the side of his residence.

City Tree Removal Plan Approved by Council

CITY Council yesterday approved a parks committee plan for removal of certain trees on city streets to improve traffic and lighting conditions.

Ald. M. Aubrey Kent, committee chairman, said the work would be done slowly and judiciously and young, smaller trees would be planted in place of the old oaks.

The trees were inspected recently by committee members and officials in a tour. Trees marked for removal are:

Every second tree in the 400 block Belleville Street; one tree in front of 4156-Luxton Street; trees in front of 1412 and 1418 Stadacona Avenue; two at Meares and Quadra Streets; alternate trees on Wark Street and alternate trees on Dunedin Street.

Council Approves Plans For New Fire Equipment

More fire halls and equipment for the city fire department was approved in policy yesterday by City Council on recommendation of the fire wardens' committee headed by Ald. Harold M. Diggon.

The committee was in support in recommending to the 1948 council that the city start a policy of gradual replacement of old equipment.

Other suggestions were that a new motor pumper be purchased next year to replace a 1929 model and that a new fire hall be built at Superior and Oswego Streets to replace the present makeshift hall for James Bay at 461 Superior.

The committee asked that property on the south side of Pandora between Belmont and Stadacona

Many Officials Present At Ceremony

Provincial Government and civic officials attended the service of Remembrance at Christ Church Cathedral Sunday.

Rev. Frank Tomalin, rector of St. Alban's Church, and former M.C.A.F. chaplain, took charge of the service. One-time Navy padre, Rev. William Hills read the prayer; Rev. John Godkin, ex-R.C.A.F., read the lesson, and Rev. Douglas Kendall, ex-Army, gave the address.

Bishop H. E. Setton welcomed Government representatives and gave the blessing at the service. Later, he placed the colors, borne by members of the Canadian Legion, in the sanctuary.

Premier Byron Johnson headed the list of Provincial Government representatives. Acting-Mayor Edward Williams, Victoria; Arthur Ash, M.L.A., Saanich; Reeve R. A. Wootton, Oak Bay, as well as other M.L.A.'s and council members from Greater Victoria municipalities were in the large congregation.

Research Caused Plant Change To Aid Conservation of Salmon

Biological research at Port Alberni changed a lumber company's plans for erection of a mill, members of the Pacific Northwest Section of the Forest Products Research Society were told yesterday at their first meeting in Vancouver.

Dr. John F. Tully, oceanographer at the Pacific Biological Station, Nanaimo, told the 112 delegates of the research that preceded installation of the Bloedel, Stewart & Welch sulphate plant at Port Alberni.

Originally planned as a sulphate plant, the mill was changed over when it was found the plant's waste from sulphite would present a hazard to fish in the Alberni Canal.

A sulphate mill has a pollution hazard of less than 50 per cent, enabling year-round operation of the mill without danger to salmon coming into the inlet.

Dr. Tully pointed out that this was a very difficult task due to additional factors of tide and wind, as well as river flow.

NOT DANGEROUS

The mill is at present operating about 25 per cent below the danger point, with a capacity of 135 tons per day, he said.

G. A. Garratt, dean of forestry at the University of British Columbia and president of society, traced the history of the newly-formed society and its aims.

"It is the intention of this organization," he said, "to act as a clearing house through which an exchange of knowledge and ideas can be effected. Much research effort is being duplicated because we are not keeping posted on what the others are doing in related fields."

J. B. Alexander, division chief of timber mechanics, Forest Products Laboratory, discussed stress grading of structural timbers.

The group will tour local mills today and proceed to Powell River on an inspection trip Wednesday.

City System of Committees Criticized, Department Responsibility Advocated

City Council's system of committees was criticized by two aldermen yesterday who urged that department heads be allowed more responsibility.

Ald. Waldo M. Skillings and M. Aubrey Kent attacked the present system and Ald. Harold M. Diggon came to its defence when the question-kept bobbing up at a City Council meeting.

Ald. Skillings started it by complaining of the "inadequacy of our committees" after hearing a letter be referred to the public works committee. The letter was from H. J. Price, 2574 Victoria Street, complaining of damage to his home by bus vibration.

Council was told that the public works committee had a previous letter from Mr. Price and one from the mayor. Ald. Diggon said the city's engineers had not yet reported back to the committee on the situation.

"I feel that here again the committee system breaks down," said Ald. Skillings, pointing to the delay in reporting on the first letter.

Ald. Diggon started it again later, when Ald. Kent was explaining how parks committee members had made a tour of the city with officials to decide what boulevard trees were to be removed.

Arena Capacity Of 4,200 Is Reported

Seating capacity of the Memorial Arena for a hockey game will be 4,200 persons, City Council was told yesterday by Charles T. Hamilton, Vancouver consulting engineer.

Mr. Hamilton, who said later he had been asked to provide seating for "not less than 4,000" in the arena, was replying to questions that the seating capacity was not great enough for the city to get Allan Cup play-offs.

The engineer said two hockey managers had told him that there was no legal limit placed on seating capacity for play-offs.

He said he also had a letter from Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, saying that "to the best of his knowledge there has never been any set minimum seating for any kind of hockey game, including play-offs."

Ald. Waldo M. Skillings, arena committee chairman, reported that Lester Patrick had told him that a capacity of from 4,000 to 5,000 is preferred but that it was "only a case of financial responsibility." As long as expenses were guaranteed, there would be no difficulty.

GRANTED PERMISSION

Permission was granted by City Council yesterday to Jack M. Lewers to use the vacant property at the northwest corner of Douglas and Humboldt Streets as a car lot.

There were two conditions—that no gas tanks be installed and only one exit and one entrance, on Douglas Street, be used. Approval was recommended by the public works and transportation committees.

"This is a case where the committee can be of great value . . . where aldermen have personally taken an interest in requests of ratepayers," Ald. Diggon said. "I submit this is a case where the plan on which we are operating is preferable."

"I don't take that attitude," Ald. Kent replied. "I still don't see why we couldn't place the responsibility on a man responsible and if he couldn't do it then we would get someone else."

Ald. Skillings explained that he was "simply criticizing the speed and efficiency" of the present system. He agreed with Ald. Kent, and said:

"I feel the aldermen do too much detailed work that the heads of the departments should do."

College Actors Prepare For Ambitious Program

With the most ambitious Victoria College production ever attempted, little more than a week away, members of the Victoria College Theatre are intensifying their efforts at rehearsals and making final arrangements.

Patrons on November 17-20 will include Lt.-Gov. Charles A. Banks, Premier Byron Johnson, Mayor Percy E. George, Education Minister W. T. Strath, Deputy Minister F. T. Fairley, Senior Municipal Inspector J. F. K. English and Municipal Inspector John Gough.

Robin Terry, theatre president, said yesterday that ticket sales were lagging slightly but that all other details of the production were on schedule.

Dress rehearsals will be held on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in the college auditorium, where the public performances will be presented.

"I think next week's production will be better than our Autumn production last year," Mr. Terry said. "The plays themselves are more interesting. We selected them because of their quality."

The group will stage four one-act plays each night. They include J. M. Barrie's "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals" and J. M. Synge's "Shadow of the Glen."

The students have been preparing for the production since the beginning of the term. The group is larger than last year, and early in the term it changed its name from the old Players' Club to indicate that technicians and stage assistants were considered as important as actors.

Never before has a Victoria College group attempted to stage its production for more than three nights.

Mr. Terry said he expected the quality of the student acting would do justice to the plays. Audrey St. Denis Johnson is helping direct.

"The Old Lady Shows Her Medals" is a comedy set on the home front during the Great War. Stars are Percia Wilkinson, Dorothy Fox, Marcia Western, Diane Sawyer, David Mallet and Connel-Wood.

"Shadow of the Glen" is a dramatic comedy of Irish peasant life. Stars are Pamela Terry, Brian Burns, Tom Ballard and Gerald Coultas.

Psychonalysis, in its more extreme and comic aspects, forms the theme of "Suppressed Desires," by Susan Glasbeil. Stars are Jean Heley, Nigel Martin and Sylvia Lash.

Pat Aikings, Dore Kilshaw and Nigel Martin play in "By Their Words Ye Shall Know Them," by Josephine and Joaquin Alveres Quintero. The plot revolves about a lovely Spanish senorita.

P.G.E. Extension Plans Are Given a Cold Bath

PREMIER Johnson's statement that the two transcontinental railway companies are no longer interested in buying a partnership in the Pacific Great Eastern Railway merely confirms suspicions that had been held for some months. It is nevertheless a serious blow to provincial hopes for an early extension of the line to the Peace River by means of an all-Canadian partnership, but Mr. Johnson has shown wisdom in taking the public into his confidence. Nothing was to be gained by withholding the knowledge that the C.N.R. and C.P.R. are definitely out of the reckoning.

Unfortunately, their withdrawal weakens British Columbia's position in any negotiations that may now be opened elsewhere. The reason offered for their attitude is that they have too much on their hands already. An inference that is more likely to be drawn, however, is that the railway companies are unable to see an adequate return for the large amount of capital outlay—$50,000,000 at the lowest estimate—that would be involved.

If, as Mr. Johnson's statement would indicate, there is some thought of the Province going ahead with the project single-handed, it behooves the Government to move very warily indeed, for the financial history of the present line is not one to encourage further expenditure of large sums of public money.

The alternative, a partnership with United States interest or an outright sale of the line to them, also calls for close scrutiny. Mr. John Hart, when he was premier, spoke repeatedly last year of overtures from the South, but as yet the public has been shown no express proposals. The way Mr. Hart put it, everybody wanted the P.G.E.; but the Dominion's two railway networks apparently do not, and if Mr. Hart was over-confident about their participation he may have been mistaken about United States interest as well.

Well-Being of Older Generations Presents Challenge

SO much nowadays is the spotlight focused on youth, its merits and demerits, its problems and its opportunities, that there is danger lest older generations be pushed into a background they do not deserve. The elder half of the human family is no less important now than ever it was; from some standpoints in fact it is even more so. The world has not reached a stage when it may become the oyster of the few, if ever that can happen.

That is why some attention is being paid at this time to the senior citizens of the country, men and women now towards the twilight of life to whom this community and nation owes much, more unfortunately than it often seems willing to repay. Only those of our elderly neighbors pressed hard by the economic facts of living know fully the straits to which some of their company have been brought. The obligation to take an interest in their well-being is one that strikes at the roots of the community spirit, to which they in their day have contributed so much.

It should be a sobering thought that but for those who are now among the senior citizens of the country, the beneficence enjoyed at the present time by so many might not have been realized. It is not given to every man or woman to scale the heights; all that may be asked is that an honorable niche be carved by each on the journey through life. This has been the persistent accomplishment of that segment of the community to whom thought is being directed, in the hope that senior citizens may know neither neglect nor distress at a time in the life span when they are less able to combat adverse currents. Old age is something inescapable to man. It should be a time when the fullness of life is enriched by memory and untroubled by want.

Auxiliary Squadron Is Voluntary Contribution

IT is difficult to understand the delay at Defence Headquarters in saying either "yes" or "no" to the offer of experienced former officers and aircrew in the Greater Victoria area who are willing to man an auxiliary reserve squadron of airplanes if the necessary support is given and the machines provided. Upward of 150 former R.C.A.F. personnel have subscribed their names to the request, or nearly the equivalent of a squadron at full strength.

In its other arrangements the Dominion has shown itself to be fully conscious of the need of keeping up a body of trained air personnel in Canada. The special short, five-year, enlistment plan for R.C.A.F. ex-officers is one case in point. So is the $100 per pilot and per flying club offered by the Dominion to civilian flying schools to train flying personnel. Both of these devices aim at retaining and securing more flyers. Yet the original scheme, the formation of auxiliary reserve squadrons across the country, seems to be languishing.

It is no small matter to have 150 trained men volunteer their services on a territorial basis in the Greater Victoria area. They could only implement that pledge at some cost to themselves in both time and money. That they are willing to do so for the country's good is all to their credit. What lags is that months of delay have ensued between the voluntary proposal and the present undecided state of response from Ottawa. When Mr. Claxton comes West shortly the matter is to be taken up again. This time it should be settled one way or the other.

TRAFFIC CONDITIONS

Sir—I heartily agree with Reeve Thomas of Esquimalt, whereby he criticizes traffic regulation in this city and general conditions which are no credit to Victoria.

I have heard many state that it is the worst city in the Pacific Northwest to drive in, and I agree.

It seems to me there is a total lack of knowledge and responsibility on the part of the human element entering the picture and that is why we have so many accidents on our streets and highways.

There ought to be an educational system set up whereby the general public could read and understand what to do, how to drive and strictly adhere to the traffic safety regulations as drawn up by the Provincial Government. Many do not bother about getting the booklet giving traffic regulations.

Now that the street-cars have gone and the rails in most places taken up there ought to be a double white line up and down all main city streets, to assist in dividing traffic.

SUPERANNUATION

Sir—Superannuation being an outlet for invested capital which cannot fluctuate and maintain its stability, belongs in the fixed income bracket. When we say, "Everyone should have superannuation!" I wonder if we realize the dollar can only expand so far without a due measure of return, if it is to remain on a solid foundation.

In the last analysis, all we have is the dollar, the value of which in our money system rises and falls in keeping with conflicting forces presently at work. This being the case, it would seem the only means we have of arriving at "pensions for all" is by payment from all in proportion. The dollar being the circulating factor in all superannuation schemes becomes the source for which we are looking and we do not need to go any further, inasmuch as the dollar principle holds itself down to the point where it can have but one outcome, value of, by and for the people.

We must provide the value by contributions, to a greater or lesser extent, in order to share the benefits in the declining years of our lives. Without investing dollars we butter no parsnips.

A. L. GREIG,

(4) 1141 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C.

SUPERANNUATION

Sir—Replying to the letter of a correspondent in your issue of November 4, in which he suggests that certain persons should try to exist on a superannuation allowance, I would like to ask the gentleman how he would like to try to exist without it, or any other source of income. Probably he would agree with Reeve Warren that superannuated men are privileged people, after all.

Furthermore, for his information, the man in the street, to whom he refers, has been making an effort for years to get the Government to make provision for the man of 65 who is legislated out of the right to earn his living, yet is physically well able to do so, and willing at the same time.

The present Government is responsible for the unhappy plight of these men, whose experience should make them valuable employees as a matter of logic, so long as they still are physically fit—as the majority of them are.

M. FRASER.

The Consolation

All, all is right; by God ordain'd or done;
And who, but God, resum'd the friends he gave?
And have I been complaining, then, so long?
Complaining of His favours; pain and death?
Who, without Pain's advice, would a'er be good?

Who, without Death, but would be good in vain?
Pain is to save from pain; all punishment,
To make for peace; and death, to save from Death;

And second death, to guard immortal life;
To rouse the careless, the presumptuous sinner;
And turn the tide of souls another way:
By the same tenderness divine ordain'd.

That planted Eden, and high bloom'd for man,
A fairer Eden, endless in the skies.

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes—and ships—and sailing was of cabbages and kings.

By TOM TAYLOR

TO begin with I suppose I should confess that all I know about wrestling is what I glean from the sports pages—or nearly so. My personal acquaintance with the mastodons—I believe that is correct sporting parlance—who perspire more mightily than did Hercules himself, is slight.

It consists, to practice a strict veracity, of the awe-stricken glimpse by a small boy of the bulging biceps of that Russian master of catch-as-catch-can, George Hackenschmidt, a notable being in his day, I may add, even if the acquisition of such artistry as floundering knee-deep in tomatoes or twisting a skull between two ropes had been denied him.

Such stimulating experiences had also been withheld from Willie Withers Bain, a name I recall for no reason other than that it came thrusting forward from the back recesses of the brain, uninvited but irresistible. He actually was the only wrestler I ever saw in action, a tall, lithe gentleman who was a Scottish champion of some sort or another. What I remember about him particularly was the inconceivable manner in which he made a human top out of his opponent, spinning him on his head until the poor fellow was too dazed to prevent his shoulders being pinned to the mat.

THE ROMAN SIGN

These banalities came into focus as I noted with interest that a Mr. Rocky Brooks, whom the newspapers advise me is an entrepreneur of importance in local wrestling circles—I was about to lapse again into felicitous idiom by using the phrase "grunt and groan" to define the affected area—has pointed a stern digit downwards in relation to the further employment of circus freaks as alleged wrestling attractions; a motion that deserves to be redounded to his credit in the form most suitable to his requirements. That victim of managerial rapacity in another realm, Mr. Primo Carnera, is apparently one gladiator against whom the Roman sign has been directed with what I feel sure is coincidental appositeness.

As a wrestler I judge that Mr. Carnera would scarcely have much more to offer than some other misplaced persons whose pseudo agonies, strangely enough, are not assessed as the insults to adult intelligence that undoubtedly they are. The patrons of wrestling imbroglis, quite obviously, are charitably inclined.

Apologies of all which is a recollection of that estimable Parisian, Monsieur Tillet, better known to the appropriate fraternity as "The Angel," one afternoon a year or so back when he visited the sports department of this newspaper. His booming voice, at delightfully cultural variance with his grotesque shoulders and huge head, penetrated into the news room to arouse the interest of a lady member of the staff who had a penchant for the autographs of celebrities. Monsieur Tillet was indubitably qualified to add his calligraphy to the collection, which he did with all of the grace for which his native land is famous.

ARTISTIC PREROGATIVE

He was given a new, unspooled page on which to make his entry, wherein devolves the sequel to this item.

Not long after his departure, there entered into the news room another formidable figure, no less than the picturesque personality of Chief Thunderbird himself. Since our autograph seeker was allergic to the philosophy that a wrestler should have no honor except in a foreign land, he was promptly invited to emulate his Parisian rival, an invitation to which the Indian chief responded, I am happy to say, with a flourish equally as polite as that of the French "Angel"; with, however, one slight but only momentary hiatus.

Chief Thunderbird could think of no justifiable reason why he should take second place to Monsieur Tillet, and so with a grandiose gesture equal to the occasion he turned to another page of the album and splashed his signature in bold flowing letters befitting his physical and vocational stature. It was a heart warming incident.

From Canada's Capital . . .

By HAROLD DINGMAN

OTTAWA.—Canadian shipbuilders are looking increasingly to naval orders to keep their yards running; but the prospect is anything but reassuring.

Most merchant ship construction will be cleaned up by 1949 and there are few if any new orders in sight. Unless something definite turns up soon, Canadian shipyards are going to have to subsist entirely on repair work.

With this situation in mind, the Canadian Shipbuilders' and Ship Repairers' Association has submitted a report to the Industrial Defence Board, whose job it is to keep the Government advised on the industrial war potential to the country. The report, signed by R. J. R. Nelson, of Halifax, president of the body, proposes co-operation with the navy on a peacetime building program.

It points out that Canada's shipbuilding and personnel are now at their peak capacity and efficiency and warns that skilled technicians will be lost to the United States unless the yards can get assurance of new orders.

The report notes that some shipyarders, in anticipation of what they fear is to come, already are beginning to be converted to other uses.

The hitch to the builders' suggestion that they embark on a peacetime naval construction program is that the Government has not yet reached a decision on what ships—if any—the peacetime navy will build. It may be that some anti-submarine vessels, to offset recent advances in underwater warfare, will be required.

But it is almost sure that no major shipbuilding program is going to be undertaken by the Canadian navy. The report is going to be considered at a meeting of the defence board later this month.

The Little Man Versus the State

(Editorial in The Ottawa Journal)

IN the breast of the Englishman there is a passion for individual rights which apparently insists on asserting itself no matter what the circumstances. Thus we find Mr. Attlee's Government proposing a law which would provide the "little man" with money to bring court action against the State.

Of this proposed law, Viscount Jowitt, Lord Chancellor, said in the Lords that it has "absolutely no parallel in any country in the world." The Labor Government, he added, has sometimes been called totalitarian, but if they got this legislation through "let it never be said again that we are desirous of crushing the rights of the small man . . . There are some rulers today who would not like such a piece of legislation."

We have an idea that a lot of people in this country would like it very much. Because the system in Canada under which a citizen cannot take the Government to court, unless the Government gives him permission to do so, seems to us wrong.

For a poor man such a system provides no recourse at all. He may have been wronged by the Government, may have his rights invaded; without means to employ a lawyer to obtain a flat to sue the Government, and then (providing the flat is granted) to carry on his case in the courts, his position is hopeless.

Even where a citizen has means to take the Government to court, he must first get the Government's permission to do so; meaning, in practice (as experience has shown again and again), that he may have to wait for months and years before such permission is given him, putting him to continued expense and trouble, and prolonging the injustice under which he may be laboring.

No right principle can hold that the Government should be immune from its own laws. Yet under our system, which debars a poor man from taking the Government to court at all, and makes it well-nigh impossible and certainly very difficult for the well-to-do citizen to take it to court, the Government if it so wills may be lawless without being called to account for it.

We hope this proposed British law helping the "little man" against the state (if they give him money to get legal aid they presumably give him a flat), gets on the statute book. The fairness of it may in time spread to other countries.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

A German arrested recently in Munich told a magistrate how he keeps his family: "From five hens we get 15 eggs a week. Five we eat, 10 we trade for two packs of American cigarettes. One pack we smoke and the other we sell on the black market for $8. That's enough." —Ainherst News.

To describe Mr. Churchill in the way of Moscow radio as "Warmonger No. 1" is like charging with arson a man who finds his house afire and shouts for help. —Edmonton Journal.

The world wants peace in its Christmas stocking.

A minister and his wife were discussing two men.

"Yes," said the minister, "I knew them both as boys. One was a clever, handsome fellow; the other a steady, hard worker. The clever lad was left behind in the race, but the hard worker—well, he died and left sixty thousand pounds to his widow. It's a great moral."

"Yes," replied his wife with a smile, "it is. I heard this morning that the clever one is going to marry the widow."

If the atom is as empty as it is declared to be it could be likened to the human skull.

He had hung around the house all evening sampling papa's wine and using up the juice on the radio.

Finally he made this flat statement to the girl friend: "I'm going to kiss you."

Her reply: "Well, do it while I'm still young."

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

IT is manifestly as unfair to expect the average college Rugby player of real talent to shine in philosophy, mathematics and languages, as it is to expect the average top honors men in those subjects to get out there and run 45 yards for a touchdown against a ravening field.

Occasionally, but only occasionally, do you find an outstanding scholar who is also an outstanding Rugby star. Yet that is the double ideal towards which many universities aim. Others are more realistic.

It is said they let the Rugby coaches mark the examination papers of the team. And a very reasonable idea that is. True, the coach may not have passed his entrance. But is it not merely the examination papers of the 30 students who constitute his team and the spares which he marks? He has something to do, in a strange and psychic sense, with all the thousands of papers being marked by all the professors on the faculty.

For what is the Rugby team in a modern university? Some say that it is the attraction which draws students to the university. It is a means of publicizing the university. Others say it is a circus spectacle which keeps the university before the eyes of the common man. It is the excuse for graduates to return to the university precincts. But there is another and often forgotten function of a Rugby team which has to do with the morals of the student body.

No man can sit, one of thousands, in the bleachers of his college stadium and watch a handful of his fellow students going through the gruelling labors of a Rugby game without his inner conscience stirring. No man can watch a victorious team of a handful of his fellow students achieve their triumph without feeling that he is part of a struggling, striving and victorious organization. A successful Rugby team imparts, to thousands of anonymous Joes, the will to strive.

General Hurls "Question Barrage"

Early Talks With Eisenhower Show Interest in People as Individuals

By KAY SUMMERBY

This is the second installment of Miss Summerby's story, "Eisenhower Was My Boss"—the human side of "army brass." In the first, she described her first meeting with General Dwight D. (Ike) Eisenhower, whose aide and secretary she was destined to become.

General Eisenhower buried dozens of questions at me about women ambulance drivers; how we got along with our male colleagues, how we managed in the rough spots. Then he asked about women who acted as air-raid officials. He went into the subject of our auxiliary forces in the army, navy, and air force.

His curiosity about people, and the individuals eventually overwhelmed his broader interest in women at war. "Tell me," he said, "how did you ever wind up with the Americans?"

I explained that the big blitz, the steady blitz, was over by the summer of 1941. About that time, I ran into an American colonel at a cocktail party. He mentioned that his little group of 17 officer "observers" (then in civilian clothes, as the United States wasn't in the war) needed drivers who knew London. I told him about our work and how life at Post No. 1 had turned dull. Several days later, a few M.T.C.

First encounter of Kay Summerby with General Eisenhower was when, as Motor Transport Corps driver assigned to U.S. Army Headquarters in London, she drew job of being his chauffeur.

It had been better than most jobs; still, I was just saying the usual goodbyes, wartime goodbyes.

General Clark mumbled something about my "efficient driving." General Eisenhower went back into the car. When he stepped out there was a precious, priceless box of sweets in his hand. "Here you are, Kay. We want you to accept this little box of candy as some sort of appreciation. And if we're ever back this way, we want you to drive us."

NEW GENERAL

Within a fortnight I was driving a new general, Carl (Tooley) Spaatz. The now famous and retired Tooley Spaatz was, in early 1942, a grimly silent major-general. As chief of the new Eighth Air Force, he had a gigantic job. And he spent every waking moment pondering over problems involved in the daring principle of daylight bombing. A rather unassuming, balding man who would hardly stand out in a crowd, he called to mind that pensive statue, "The Thinker." He concentrated so intently that I often thought he was asleep. Naturally, he had no time for the ordinary little details of everyday life. He was, in fact, coldly impatient with them.

Gradually I became experienced in a part I was to play for General Eisenhower, that of "unofficial aide." It was rather embarrassing the first time. I had just let General Spaatz out at Claridge's after a long, tiring day. He leaned in the car window and said: "You'd better come on up Kay, I may need you later." I parked and joined him at the elevator.

Walking into the suite was very much like walking into a Hollywood version of a cocktail party. In fact, it was a Hollywood version, because the general's aide, Major Sy Bartlett, was and is a writer in the movie capital. Using the exclusive hotel and the high-brass atmosphere as props, he had begun to stage a straight run of parties attended by other Hollywood-Broadway figures and the show people of London's West End. The smoke, the noise and the rank were overpowering.

LONG SILENCES

The general nodded briefly to everyone and strode into another room. I trailed along. He closed the door, sighed heavily, and sagged into a chair. I stood there uneasily, then sat down stiffly.

We sat like that—without a word—for the better part of two hours. He sat and thought; I sat and fidgeted. Finally, he looked up. "Thanks, Kay. Guess I won't be needing you any more tonight."

The scene became a common occurrence. I think it was partly because the general wanted me to stand by for any sudden trips, partly because he liked to have company during those nightly thinking bouts. Several times General Spaatz directed me to tour bombed-out sites around London. It was no marauding, sight-seeing curiosity. He had been in bettered London during the original Luftwaffe assault, sitting on roofs during the heavy raids and making notes on Nazi tactics. Now, he studied the debris itself with all the intensity of an engineer. He was studying bomb damage firsthand; there was no better laboratory, outside Hitler's Europe. In the Lambeth district I pointed out our old M.T.C. headquarters and he soon got me talking about those experiences. It knocked a few chips from the wall of reserve between us. . . . I even told him about Dick.

"NEVER COMPLAIN"

My two-star passenger leaned forward. For once the furrows were gone from his forehead, the cold-steel missing from his eyes.

"Kay," he said, "I don't talk much. But I've hung onto you as a driver because you have a conscience something like mine. You never complain if I keep you late or if I ask you to do some odd job at which any other driver would protest." He smiled. "I never realized what these evening chores mean. From now on, any time your captain isn't away on a trip—just let me know. We'll arrange time-off, somehow. War stops for some things."

That's the way things were until one fine Summer evening when I pulled up at Claridge's almost four weeks later. General Spaatz jumped into the back seat and muttered, "Important mission. Hendon airport—and don't spare the horses!"

There's something special about an airplane coming in to land, no matter how many you've traveled on or how many you've met. Judging from the array of awaiting brass and the way General Spaatz dashed out on Hendon's runway, there was something extra-special about this plane. I ran over to see the V.I.P.'s unloads.

Two wide shoulders appeared in the door, each bearing two stars. Above them, a full face with a broad grin—General Eisenhower was back! (Copyright, 1948, by Kay Summerby)

Pole and Hungarian Insist You Can't Deal With Stalin

Interpreting the News

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.

A. P. Foreign Affairs Analyst. Two former premiers of Russian satellite countries came out this week with additional testimony on the theme that you can't do business with Stalin.

They are Stanislas Mikolajczyk, in "The Rape of Poland," published by Whittlesby House, and Ferenc Nagy, in "The Struggle Behind the Iron Curtain," published by Macmillan.

They make it doubly clear that, while the Western Powers may need to "keep the door open" by positive efforts to negotiate a settlement with the Communists, no agreement with the Kremlin is worth any more than the word of men who are educated to the belief that to break a promise for "the cause" is to earn a reward in the Leninist heaven.

BOTH LEADERS
Both former premiers are now in exile. Mikolajczyk fled for his life. Nagy resigned under threats, one of them against his young son. Both were prewar leaders of democratic movements. Both represented majority peasant parties overwhelmed by Communist strong-arm methods.

Mikolajczyk is bitter over Anglo-American appeasement of Russia which, he says, extended as far back as 1941, even when the German armies still threatened Moscow. He was prevented, he says, from telling the world the story of Russian imperialism before it was too late.

Nagy, too, talks much of the Allied abandonment of democracy in Hungary, and of Russia's complete domination of the Allied Control Commission before the peace treaty. England and the United States have long since learned the error of their ways in these respects. Nagy's pitiful story of believing he could work with the Communists for the benefit of Hungary, and later his hope that he could absorb some of the shock before its full weight struck his country, is a greater lesson now for Italy and France than for Britain and the United States.

From it a country threatened by the fifth columns can learn to guard against Communist methods. Nagy tells how they subvert a labor union; of their methods of usury; Mikolajczyk and Nagy both give vivid descriptions of how to steal an election; how to get the interior (police) portfolio in a coalition Government; how to export and "liquidate" your opposition. How the Communists in Hungary were perfectly willing to stir up anti-Semitism for their own purposes.

Both of these men had seen the inside of prisons, long before Yalta, because of their interest in the welfare of their fellowmen.

They looked to America, and America wasn't there. They looked to the East, and the Red army, the NKVD and the fifth columnists were in full array. They tried to do business with Russia in a dead-end street.

MORTGAGE INSURANCE

HOME is where your heart is.

Next to loving his wife and children, the average man is in love with his home.

His spare time is devoted to making it more "livable". He is forever busy with hammer and saw, screw driver and pliers, paint brush or garden spade—determined to convert the house into a "home".

Most men assume a mortgage when they move their families into "homes".

The mortgage is often a source of worry, too, because they fear what may happen if it becomes necessary for the mortgagee to foreclose at some future date.

That is the reason why mortgage life insurance is becoming increasingly popular. For about 1% additional interest (depending upon age of the home-owner) it is possible to secure a policy which will pay off the mortgage in event of the home-owner's death—thus making sure that the family will be able to continue to call the home "home", with only taxes to pay and normal "wear and tear" to finance.

Plans are available for both types of mortgages. If you are paying for your home on the amortized basis—a fixed amount monthly, just like rent, for twenty or more years, there is a plan which gears in with the outstanding amount of principal at the end of each year.

Or if your house has one of the older styles of mortgages where you pay interest plus a fixed amount on account of principal each year, there is a yearly-reducing plan to keep pace with it.

May we tell you more about the cost of a mortgage policy for your own case?

BEARDED MEN GATHER AT PORT ALBERNI

Alberni Hunter Dies

CAMPBELL RIVER, Nov. 8.—George Cecil Edward, 22, Alberni, came to his death by accident at Spirit Lake in Sayward District about noon last Sunday. It was decided by Magistrate P. G. Lewis after a coroner's inquiry at Campbell River.

Edward was hunting with James Olson, 28, and Harold Cornell, 14, both of Alberni, about 15 miles from B.C. Forest Service Camp No. 23. When he rested the butt of his rifle on a log, it suddenly discharged and sent a 30-30-calibre bullet through his chest. He died a few seconds later.

Rural School Districts Appoint Representatives

LADYSMITH, Nov. 8.—All annual meetings have been held in the rural school attendance areas of Ladysmith School District No. 87. Reports were read by F. Vandecasteyen, secretary-treasurer, and members of the school board attended.

North Oyster District elected Mrs. G. Wyndlow, D. Wilson and G. A. Ashwell representatives, and Diamond District named B. Box, W. Slade and R. Tetlock for the two-year terms. The six representatives will meet shortly to appoint one of their numbers a trustee on the school board.

Oyster District met in Salsair School. Although the meeting was called by the school board to discuss school affairs and annual reports, representatives of the Chemainus Ratepayers' Association attended to discuss the forthcoming plebiscite. F. R. Badd, head of the Salsair Ratepayers' Association, opened the meeting. Chemainus ratepayers, with some support from the Salsair group, favor a separate school district at Chemainus, but the Provincial Department of Education is not in favor of the plan.

C. C. Jones, chairman of the school board, said the proposed new school was classified as a ten-classroom school, but in actuality it would have 23 rooms for instruction. J. M. Petrak, senior principal of the school district, pointed out that Ladysmith was the geographical centre of the district, drawing students from North Oyster on the north and Chemainus on the south. Design Station

The Dominion Department of Trade and Commerce announced yesterday that the Canadian Commercial Corporation, Ottawa, would receive tenders up to November 24 for the construction of a frequency modulation station on top of Mount Prevost at Duncan.

Intervention of the war delayed the handing over of the memorial window to the school. The ceremony was performed by H. C. P. Cresswell, Montreal, representing the C.P.R., and the window was received by Logan Mayhew, Victoria, representing the school governors.

Members of the board of governors, their wives and the Fairbridge children and staff attended the dedication service conducted by Rev. T. L. Hipp, school chaplain, with Rev. Canon T. M. Hughes, first school chaplain, pronouncing the blessing.

The window inscription reads: "To the memory of Colonel J. S. Dennis, C.M.G., 1886-1938, friend and counsellor of the Prince of Wales Fairbridge Farm School. His colleagues, the president and officers of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, here record their comradeship and esteem."

The window consists of three panels. The story of Christianity and agriculture are blended symbolically in six medallions, three in each outer panel, with 16 agricultural implements of Biblical times interspersed between them.

Mr. Cresswell was present at the London meeting in 1934 when the then Prince of Wales spoke on behalf of the Fairbridge scheme, and donated the first £1,000 of the £60,000 objective, and agreed that his name should be given to the first new school established under the scheme. A tribute to the life of Col. Dennis as soldier in the Riel Rebellion, pioneer surveyor of Western Canada and pioneer immigration official of the C.P.R., was paid by Mr. Cresswell in an address during the dedication ceremony.

Blocks Fouled, Tug Turns on Side

Keel blocks jammed as 90-foot tug Spray of Victoria Tug Co. Ltd. was being hoisted onto marine slipway at Bay Street plant of Victoria Machinery Depot Co. Ltd. yesterday morning. Above photo shows vessel after rolling over on port side, in cradle. Three men, in engine room at time, escaped unharmful. They were Alex Laird, second engineer of tug, and L. Forbes and R. Fielden, machinists of local machine shop. Vessel is undergoing annual overhaul. Company officials said last night accident was caused by mishap three weeks ago when tug grounded on Ten Mile Point. Grounding broke keel, part of which fouled keel blocks when vessel was being taken from water. Tug is expected to be floated Wednesday morning.

Lighthouse Demolished by Gale; Gets Tow
Keeper, Family Go to Hospital

The story of a storm-shattered lighthouse, a miraculous midnight escape in scant clothes and four days and nights clinging to a gale-swept island was told in a Prince Rupert hospital today.

R. L. Wilkins, his wife and ten-year-old son, Denis, arrived Sunday from their Egg Island light station and now are recovering from exposure and injuries from their four-day "nightmare."

They told how their tiny light station on Egg Island in the Queen Charlotte Sound, about 200 miles south of here, broke up last Tuesday night during one of the West Coast's worst storms.

Driven from their beds, the trio scrambled across a small narrow bridge connecting the light station with Egg Island proper just minutes before the gales and tide swept the lighthouse and the bridge into the swollen seas.

Following the escape from the shattering lighthouse, Wilkins said "we watched a tremendous wave come out of the roaring sea and lift our house right up."

"We were scared stiff."

"I had only a pair of pants over my pyjamas and my wife had only a few clothes on."

"There are a few rabbits on the island and I killed one of them. We tried to cook it but it didn't taste very good. We had water but it was filled with bracken washed in by the sea."

The first indication anything was amiss with the light station came Thursday, 48 hours after it had plunged into the sea, when a Mainland wireless station was unable to get a reply from a routine call.

Efforts to investigate proved of no avail in the pounding seas until Sunday when the fish packer Sunny-boy landed and rescued the Wilkins family. They were taken to Pinn Bay, a fishing camp several miles north, then transferred to the B.C. Packers boat Klatswa, which took them to Bella Bella. They are being treated for exposure and slight injuries.

New Liner
Will Carry
Six Launches

Marine News

Seven launchings affecting the new Cunard White Star luxury liner Caronia will have taken place before the largest passenger liner built since the end of the war enters service in January, officials of the line have reported.

Launching of the 34,000-ton liner which took place last month, will be followed by individual launchings of six 45-foot Diesel-driven launches. The Caronia will carry them to enable passengers to land comfortably while at anchor off cruise ports.

Each of the smaller craft will be launched into the Clyde in the same manner as the Caronia herself, and all will make individual trial runs before being hoisted aboard in specially-built gravity davits.

Each of the launches will have a capacity of 60 passengers, and will be 45 feet long with a 15-foot beam and a depth of six feet. Driven by 140-horsepower engines, each launch will have a speed of ten knots when fully loaded. They will be built of aluminum alloy, and have built-in, air-tight compartments. Winches for returning the launches to their davits on the liner are the most powerful electric winches yet installed in an ocean liner.

Manoeuvres

What the United States Navy called its most extensive North Atlantic manoeuvres were climaxed yesterday by an "invasion" of Newfoundland by units of the Second Fleet.

The theoretical landing was accomplished, according to reports received by the navy in Boston, despite strong submarine "attacks" on the 100-ship fleet.

Units of the Second Marine Brigade, wearing special Arctic equipment, swam ashore on Northern Argentina beaches. They were under orders to capture Argentina and its heavily-defended air base.

Snorkel-breathing submarines were credited with "sinking" or "crippling" an undisclosed number of the invading force.

Floods Cause
Little Drop
In B.C. Crops

Despite heavy damage from Spring floods this year, British Columbia agricultural production will be only slightly less than last year.

Total value of production in 1947 was estimated at $134,000,000 as against a forecast of $130,000,000 for this year.

The Department of Agriculture blames the drop on the floods, the cold Spring, which prevented proper pollination of cherries and some other early small fruits, and failure of tree crops to come up to expectations.

The value of the apple crop this year is placed at $12,964,000 as against $14,000,000 for 1947. Value of all kinds of fruits was estimated at $24,500,000 compared with $25,703,000 for last year.

Although giving no supporting figures, the department estimated total livestock production as well as deer. The freighter King David, poultry will be slightly higher than recently here, will call at Cowichan last year. Value of field crops is expected to be lower this year than last.

How television makes jobs
for Canadians

The eye of the television camera is an image-orthicon tube. The heart of the receiving set is a cathode-ray tube. Most metal parts of these tubes are nickel or nickel alloys.

In television receivers there are also from 16 to 32 or more radio tubes of which the metal parts are nickel, nickel alloys or nickel coated. Nickel is also used in x-ray tubes and in long distance telephone systems, including those using the new coaxial cable.

Television has been developed through long and exhaustive research by individuals and manufacturers of electrical equipment, and in this research the International Nickel research laboratories have co-operated to the fullest extent.

The development of television has given rise to an entirely new market for Canadian Nickel. New jobs are created for Canadians both in the Nickel industry and in industries which make equipment containing Nickel.

Thus does research develop better products, create more employment.

Olivier Shows Brilliant Artistry In Bringing 'Hamlet' to Screen

Using the medium of the motion picture, Sir Laurence Olivier is brilliantly succeeding in bringing the great Shakespearean plays out of the classroom, the lecture hall and the rare stage production back to the man in the street, for whom they were originally written and produced.

The long-awaited "Hamlet" was seen in preview on Sunday night here. It will be presented at the Odeon Theatre November 15, 16 and 17.

It was a moving experience. Probably no two persons will agree as to whether, in streamlining a four-and-a-half-hour play to two-and-a-half hours, the cutting has been too drastic as, for instance, the complete elimination of Rosencrantz, Guildenstern and Fortinbras and several soliloquies.

As has come to be expected in the best of the English films, the casting, down to the smallest bit-part, was excellent, with fine pointing of the lines, and clear diction.

QUITE DIFFERENT

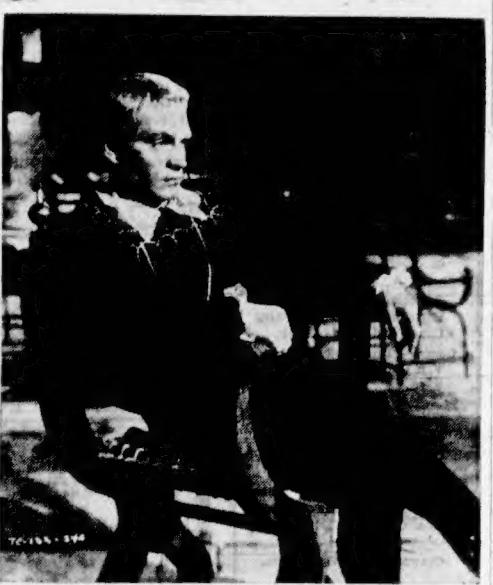

Sir Laurence's interpretation of Hamlet is quite different from that of many of his predecessors in the role. With one or two exceptions, he underplays with a restraint that makes his rough handling of Ophelia, and later of Gertrude the more startling. He is a pure delight to watch for the complete bodily control, and the change of facial expression reflecting his moods.

There were few lighter moments, and the gentle pat on the head of the performing dog as he welcomes the players when he remarks "I'm glad to see thee well" was a gem. Another fine piece of natural comedy was the by-play between Laertes and Ophelia, just before his departure for Paris. The contrast between the attitude of the brother and sister, and that of their pompous old father, giving unasked for advice and admonition, was beautifully timed and acted.

Norman Wooland as Horatio did an effective piece of character acting in his portrayal of the steadfast friend. Felix Aylmer as the bumbling Polonius was particularly good in his scene with the King, as he reads the letter from Hamlet to Ophelia.

GAY TOUCH

Tenacious Morfran as Laertes had a gay lightness of touch in his first scene, that was well contrasted with his grief and desire to be revenged for the death of his father, near the conclusion of the play. Basil Sydney, as the corrupt, weak usurper of the throne of Denmark, and sly, oily speech of affection for Hamlet was particularly effective.

Two lesser roles that were especially well played were those of the French courtier with his effeminate bowings and scrapings and the grave-digger, whose comedy was of a very different sort. Incidentally, one of the most effective incidents in the play was the way Hamlet handled the skull of Yorick, laying it against his own cheek, with the empty sockets staring into the audience.

Eileen Herlie as Gertrude, Queen of Denmark, had a rich deep voice, beautifully modulated, and played her scenes with Hamlet with a sure sense of contrasting mood. She was tender, quiet, and very moving in her pleading with him to take his father's death less seriously. In the bedroom scene where Polonius is killed, her acting of straight tragedy was magnificent. There was no difficulty seeing why Hamlet the Sider, and his murderer were so enamoured of her, but she did seem a little young to be the mother of such a stalwart son.

ELFIN QUALITY

Jean Simmons as Ophelia brings to the role a very appealing elfin quality. Her training has been altogether in the films, and she makes of an otherwise almost incredible character something quite believable and most moving. Her change from a happy, if somewhat dreamy girl to a haunted, distraught creature is well portrayed.

The film is black and white and there is little pageantry. Roger Funn's sets are severely plain, so there is nothing to distract from the beauty of the lines. Good use is made of corridors, arches, flights of winding stairs for added drama, and even costumes are kept simple. There is the same fine economy in the direction, which is beyond all praise.

Saanich P.C.'s To Hear Former M.P.

MAJ.-GEN. G. R. PEAKES, V.C., M.P., and L. J. LADNER, K.C., former Conservative member for Vancouver South, will be guest speakers at an annual meeting of the Saanich Progressive Conservative Association, next Monday at the Lake Hill Community Hall, starting at 8 p.m.

Mr. Ladner was elected to the House of Commons as Conservative member for Vancouver South in 1921, and held the seat until 1930. At the recent national convention of the Progressive Conservative Party, Mr. Ladner stressed the necessity of reducing government costs and taxes if the cost of living was to be brought down. The convention passed a resolution on Mr. Ladner's recommendation. It said the general rate of income tax be lowered, that tax-exempted income should be at least $2,500 for married persons and that the exemption for dependent children be increased by $200.

Mr. Ladner was elected chairman of the taxation and trade sub-committee and was largely responsible for introduction of the trade and taxation resolution adopted by the convention.

Double Bill In Movies On Decline

Though it's not by any means extinct, the double feature movie is on the decline in Canada.

That's one of the bits of information presented in the Bureau of Statistics' annual survey of the Canadian movie trade, which shows that last year the bargain bill made up 53 per cent of performances against 57 in 1946 and 59 the year before.

Some other points in the report: A record $76,684,000 was shoved through the box-offices, five per cent up from 1946. Of the total, $15,819,000 went to the Government in amusement tax.

The take was a record $6.36 for every man, woman and child in Canada. This was 15 cents up from 1946.

Despite the higher receipts, attendance declined from 227,539,000 in 1947 to 220,557,000 last year.

The average admission price in 1947 (exclusive of tax) was 25.5 cents, compared with 23.3 the year before.

Theatres had increased receipts in all provinces except Nova Scotia, where the 1947 take was down 10 per cent from 1947.

Only P.E.I. and Quebec showed increased attendance.

'Show Boat' Production Moves at Sparkling Pace; Dance Numbers Snappy; Comedy Routines Big Hit

Particularly clever dancing, good characterization and the swift pace at which the 15 scenes were taken made the opening night of "Show Boat," at the Royal Theatre last night, a great success.

The audience thoroughly enjoyed the performance, especially the effervescent Captain Andy, played by Billy House. In the scene on the show boat when he puts on his revamped play there was some very funny deliberate ham acting. Jack Benny had nothing on Captain Andy and his fiddle, whose by-play with the bow, explanation of his difficulties were hilarious.

Pamela Caveness, as the dainty leading lady, Magnolia, showed excellent characterization throughout the play. Her soprano voice is powerful, if not very musical in certain numbers. Her singing of "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man" to guitar accompaniment in the cabaret scene in the second act was one of her best numbers.

FINE BARITONE

Norwood Smith, as Gaylord Ravenal, has a fine baritone voice, and his characterization was also good. His was the best voice in the company.

pany. Terry Saunders, as Julie, the girl who has to leave the show boat company because of the prejudice against colored people playing with whites, has a nice middle register soprano, heard most effectively in "Bill."

Outstanding feature of the show was the extraordinarily clever acrobatic dancing of Sammy White as Frank, and the brilliant performance of the young negro dancer, La Verne French, whose agility, body control and projection left the audience gasping.

Round after round of applause followed his numbers, and when he came out to take his curtain call, he seemed as fresh as when he started. It was his high leaps and twists in mid-air that were most amazing, and the whole dance troupe was outstanding.

Another clever bit of contortion was that of Walter Russell as the drunk. This could have been offensive, but his excellent timing and restraint made it more of a study in balance than anything else.

William C. Smith, as Joe, sang the popular "Ol' Man River" in a deep bass-baritone which carried well, had resonance, but tended to become merely noisy in spots. Helen Dowdy was Quennie, the cook on the show boat, and Joe's better half.

Ruth Gates as Martha Ann, the New England wife of Captain Andy, was excellent. Her efforts to prevent her adored Magnolia from going on the stage were played with a deft touch in contrast to her scenes with the happy-go-lucky Andy. Claire Alden as Ellie, who ultimately goes Hollywood, had something of a triumph all her own in her final scene.

The sets were very effective, the period costumes fresh and dainty, and the whole show full of laughs. It is being repeated this afternoon and tonight.

Hawk of the Wilderness

By WILLIAM G. CHESTER

Now Kendie was uttering words which would put the final stamp of proof upon all he revealed. "What will I tell Beth? Nothing... Who's ever to know I let him die? Nobody... Who cares if he's dead? Nobody. Great hunter-warrior—all that rot! Only good Indian's a dead Indian." Low laughter shook the sick man, subsiding as suddenly as if choked off. But that poor infected mind was not yet done discharging its troubled secrets. "But he's not dead. He's alive—killing again. Beth must know—must learn. Kendie started suddenly up, as if electrified by apprehension. "What if he comes here? Good God! But he can't. They've got him in a cage... But what if he gets out... I had the chance—why didn't I kill him?... Well... If he comes here, Beth might have forgiven the abandonment, since she had long ago forgiven the state of mind which led up to it. But the utter baseness of this continued deception was the final blow to her affection for Allan Kendie.

Her promise to him need no longer be honored, since it had been asked and given under false pretenses. Had he been well, she would have left him at once, to go to Kioga. But he was calling her name now. Pity welled up in her. The thought of deserting him in this hour of need was too much for her. She would wait, until he showed definite improvement, then communicate with the Snow-Hawk.

Dr. James Munro, returning to New York with a trunkful of fresh Indian relics, encountered a young woman on the doorstep of his house. It was Beth, weary and wan after her long siege at the hospital.

"I am looking for Dr. Munro," she explained.
"I am Dr. Munro, Miss La Salle." "You know my name?" in surprise. "Better than you think," he told her gently. "Kioga has told me of what happened on the floor."

He saw her breath suddenly quicken. In answer to his summons a manservant appeared. Munro gave an order.
"Wake Mr. Rand. Tell him Miss La Salle is here."

The servant looked surprised. "Why—Mr. Rand's gone out, sir. I'm sure he went out during the night and left a note on the hall table. 'Ere it is, sir.'"

Hastily Munro tore open the envelope. The note was in Kioga's bold script. It read:

"The winds blow for me. I return whence I come, to live and die an Indian. I am convinced that Beth has decided in favor of Kendie. Perhaps that is best. I could not live as a white man—for long. And I have no right to urge her to a life away from her home and people."

"A third of the gems in our safe-deposit box, I give to you. The log-book and the picture-skin, and the photographs—all are yours to do with as you see fit."

"The remaining stones, please turn into funds. Put the money at the disposal of Miss La Salle—and of Allan Kendie, if that is her wish."

The letter was unsigned; Munro handed it to Beth. Then, without loss of a moment he resorted to every means at his command by which to reach the writer—telephone, telegraph and he combined forces of radio and the police of three Governments. But in vain. Kioga had vanished as completely as he had effaced himself in the green crypts of his native forests.

Day after day the girl's persistence in pursuit amazed Munro. When he admitted defeat, it was Beth who clung to the hope that somehow, somewhere, Kioga would be recognized and detained. The scientist shook his head.

"All the border forces couldn't stop him if he wanted to pass."

Beth hardly heard him. She was thinking of a freilicht cavern in the heart of a wild and savage land

New Serial Begins Tomorrow

I was quite a jump from a New York law office to an Arizona trading post, and Rosemary Taylor's quiet life seemed so far behind in this colorful country.

The action and adventure she found in contained in a new serial, "Forest Fury," by Oren Arnold, which starts tomorrow in The Colonist.

called Na'wa, with open arms and beautiful eyes, for the mighty warrior scorned by a Christian maid. For Helad, henceforth, he would wing the arrow swiftly away and bring in the fresh-killed deer.

Beth no longer asked herself if she could have lived the life of an Indian wife, taken up an Indian woman's burden, shared the man she loved with others, in the Indian way. She knew now that anything was preferable to this intolerable separation. She had the will and the means—what with his princely request to follow him to the ends of the earth. She told Munro so.

"You would go to these lengths—even into the Arctic?"

"Wherever the trail leads, Dr. Munro," she assured him quietly. The words echoed in Munro's mind. Here was the dream of a lifetime. A new land to be discovered, new history to be written. Adventure, exploration, his name added to the illustrious roster of those who sought in vain the secret of the polar North. A monument to be erected above those unmarked graves.

He was powerfully stirred by the prospect of gazing upon the glittering mosaic of Indian existence, unspoiled in its ancient liberty. He was attracted as are all true adventurers by the lure of unknown, uncharted places. But in the end his decision turned upon the fact that a part of his own heart was buried with Helen Rand on unknown Na'wa. It seemed fitting that he should follow her there.

"It's a long trip, full of danger," he warned Beth. "There's the risk of hunger, snow-blindness, freezing—some of which you've already experienced."

She looked up at him, smiled and answered: "There's also Kioga—and that's all in the world I care about."

The daughter of pioneers had spoken.

(THE END)

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

THAT WORD "KEG"

A keg of beer is a cask, or barrel, of beer. With some variation in spelling, it has had this meaning for some 800 years in English speech. Although it is found in the form of kegs as early as the year 1532, actually the word is a corruption of the older form, "kag."

Now there is a Dutch word, kag, which denotes a fishing boat. And from the fact that ships long have been named interchangeably with casks or tubs, there are those who would attribute the derivation of this "keg" of ours to that Dutch term. However, that ranks only as a supposition.

Actually the old kag, of which "keg" is a corruption, is in Old Norse as kaggi, and in Swedish as kage; in Anglo-Saxon it is kaek. Its original sense seems to have been that of a tree stump and it would not be unnatural to apply this to the hollowed-out stump which would make a keg!

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—A citizen of 91 had just been nominated for membership in the Australian Jockey Club. When it was explained to him that there were 700 ahead of him on the waiting list, and he would probably have to wait several years, he said, "That's all right. I can wait."

Commission To Settle Airpark Issue Suggested in Saanich Council Brief

Seaside Police Chief Josiah Bull and Oak Bay Police Chief H. G. F. Reston would be nominated by the airport group to rule on the public nuisance phase of the project.

Presidents of the Saanich Board of Trade, Victoria Senior and Junior Chambers of Commerce and the Vice-president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce should be appointed to ascertain if the airport would benefit trade and industry, according to the brief.

PLANNING GROUP
Chairmen of the Oak Bay and Victoria town planning commissions are suggested as members so they could say whether the airport is in accordance with up-to-date town planning developments.

Presidents of ratepayers' associations from Ward One, Two, Four, Five and Six are recommended as members to offer expressions of opinion regarding Ward Three Ratepayers' objections to the street

It is also recommended that the president of the Trades and Labor Council, Percy Raymond, be appointed to list benefits to be obtained relative to employment of skilled labor.

The apark association recommends that the inspector of municipalities, B. C. Bracewell, be senior officer to obtain reports from the commission members.

"His position confers upon him the voice of authority in asking the Saanich Council to accept the findings of the commission," states Mr. Scott in the brief.

"This body of thoughtful recommendations from such recognized experts in their own fields warrants less the airport issue being settled with a commonsense dignity, and would be in the interests of Saanich and Greater Victoria," the brief concludes.

Little Stories for Bedtime

By THORNTON W. SUGGESS

PETER DOUBTS HIS OWN EYES

If you cannot believe your own eyes what can you believe? You know there is an old saying that seeing is believing. But as Peter Rabbit stared across at the highest hole in the side of the big pit in Farmer Brown's garden he actually doubted the truth of this. In fact, he doubted if he really saw what his eyes seemed to see. He blinked them two or three times, then looked again. His eyes told him the same thing that they told him before. They told him that Old Mr. Toad was sitting right at the entrance to that little hole halfway between the bottom and the upper edge of that deep pit with its straight walls, and that was something Peter couldn't believe. He just couldn't that was all. He turned his head and looked about in the garden. Everything looked just as usual. There was nothing wrong with his eyes. Then he looked back at that little hole. Here sat Old Mr. Toad looking just as natural as possible.

Was he dreaming? Peter turned his head and gently bit one of his long hind legs just to make sure that he was awake. There was no doubt about it, he was awake. He felt those sharp teeth. There was no dream about those. "Once more he looked over at the little hole. There sat Old Mr. Toad just as before.

"I don't believe it!" exclaimed Peter right out loud.

"Don't believe what?" asked a funny little voice. It was the voice of Old Mr. Toad.

"I don't believe my own eyes," said Peter, "or my own ears either, for that matter."

"What's the matter with them?" asked Old Mr. Toad.

"Say," replied Peter, "are you really Old Mr. Toad or not?"

Old Mr. Toad chuckled. He chuckled for a long time before he replied. "So far as I know I'm really Old Mr. Toad," said he. "I don't think I am anyone else. Don't I look natural? What's wrong about me?"

"You look natural enough," replied Peter. "You look too natural. That's what is wrong—you look too natural. If you were down on the bottom of this pit you would look all right. But you are up in that hole, halfway to the top, and you simply can't be there, that's all. You can't fly and you can't climb, so how can you be in that hole?"

Old Mr. Toad began to chuckle again.

Just then a bug came flying along and stopped to see what that hole was like. Even as Peter watched it, it disappeared as suddenly as if it had vanished into nothing. Old Mr. Toad smacked his lips just as Peter had seen him do many times when he had caught a bug that tasted good. "That bug was real, anyway," said he. "If you see any more like it just send them over here, will you, Peter? It will be a great favor. It isn't as easy getting a meal here as up in Farmer Brown's garden, and I need all I can get. I certainly shall be glad when I get back there."

"But Mr. Toad how can you get back there?" asked Peter.

"By keeping on the same way I've reached here," replied Old Mr. Toad in the most matter of fact tone.

"But I don't see how you have got up where you are, and that is why it is such hard work for me to believe my own eyes," cried Peter.

"I've been over here every day since you fell into this pit and not once have seen you or any sign of you."

"Oh, yes, you have," interrupted

Old Mr. Toad. "That is, you've seen signs of me, even if you haven't seen me."

"I'd like to know where!" exclaimed.

"You seen these holes in the wall of the pit, haven't you?" hepled Old Mr. Toad.

"Yes," said Peter, "and I've gone almost crazy trying to find out who made them."

"I did," replied Old Mr. Toad, and began to chuckle again.
